Chuncheon enjoys the best of both worlds, boasting both the conveniences of a thriving, modern industrial city, and some of the most beautiful natural scenery in Korea.

Chuncheon can be reached by car, bus and train.

Those traveling by car or bus are advised that Chuncheon, as the administrative heart of Kangwon province, is serviced with an excellent road system.

In addition, the route leading to the city extends along the Han River, commanding a very scenic view. However, it is the difficulty of driving through the heavy traffic of a large city like Seoul that can make the journey unnecessarily long. A viable alternative is to take the train.

The rail journey from Cheongnyangny station in Seoul to Chuncheon takes approximately two hours, and offers the traveler the opportunity to enjoy beautiful scenery.

Moreover, this journey will be cut considerably once the high-speed train service is completed. Traffic is rarely a problem in Chuncheon, and, once in the city, the University can be reached easily and cheaply by taxi.
